This is who we are!

Casa Cares is a guesthouse near Florence, in the village of Reggello, surrounded by vineyards, olive orchards and woods. Casa Cares, like all the Waldensian Houses, Hotels and Lodges in Italy, is a non-profit institution that sustains projects of social solidarity and environmental sustainability through its activities in the hospitality sector.

Casa Cares is a guest house and center for meetings, immersed in nature and with particular attention to the care of the environment. Casa Cares takes care of 5 hectares between a vegetable garden, olive groves and woods. In the vegetable garden, the staff of Casa Cares cultivate fine local vegetables, medicinal and aromatic herbs by using organic farming methods (although not certified).

The structure hosts groups, seminars and workshops. It's a place that lives in harmony with the territory that surrounds the farm.

About the activity

Casa Cares hosts volunteers who support the staff in managing the facility, ranging from home care to garden maintenance, as well as in networking with the local area, social communication, and marketing, in order to enhance the centre's potential. According to their aptitudes, abilities, and interests, volunteers are encouraged to participate actively and to put forward personal proposals that can be developed during their experience at Casa Cares. They are directly involved in the implementation and promotion of activities and in building relationships with the guests of the facility.

Through this involvement, volunteers are stimulated to follow a path of personal and professional growth, always supported by the staff members working in the structure.

Volunteers are coordinated by the Structure Manager and by the Head of the Environmental Sector, who supervises them during outdoor activities related to the garden. Throughout their stay, volunteers learn the importance of caring for the environment, including waste separation, recycling, and looking after the garden plants. They also experience the value of teamwork by closely collaborating with the entire staff and actively participating in staff meetings, as well as the importance of multiculturalism through interaction with international guest groups and other foreign volunteers.

As part of the environmental initiatives, volunteers are encouraged to actively propose ideas and solutions to promote increasingly sustainable and plastic-free stays, contributing to ongoing efforts to reduce environmental impact. In addition, volunteers will take part in the organisation and management of a summer camp for children aged 8 to 13, held during the summer period. This represents an important opportunity to help create educational and enjoyable experiences for children, with a strong emphasis on teamwork and environmental awareness.

Within the facility there is also a small olive oil and local history museum that offers guided tours and creative workshops. Volunteers will be involved in improving and cataloguing the preserved items, as well as in organising creative workshops for visitors. Candidates interested in experimenting with artistic and creative forms of expression will be particularly welcome

The presence of volunteers enhances the service and its activities and is, both for the structure and for guests, a valuable and stimulating presence that gives way to ever new paths of growth and improvement.
