The open youth center polaris regards itself as part of the local educational landscape and aims at creating favorable conditions for young people to grow up. Our main overall task is political and cultural education. The center's structural objective is to implement open child and youth work as part of the all-day education in its neighborhood, Jena-Nord. Objectives in terms of content are to optimize development opportunities of children and young people by broadening their experiences, enhancing their capacity to reflect and increasing their alternatives for action.

Number Of Volunteer	: 1 (One)

This is who we are!

Waldkindergarten is a kindergarten with a forest pedagogical and open approach for children between one year and school entrance. In our work, we dedicate ourselves to the ethical values according to nature and environmental education. Basically, we are out in nature in any weather, except during storms or temperatures far below freezing. The smallest children stay with us in the garden or make small trips in the nearby nature. The kindergarten day is determined by recurrent rituals and processes, embedded in the annual cycle of nature. Children will particularly experience those through daily trips to nature. With all senses, the children can experience the transitions of the seasons, the cold, heat, rain and snow, as well as the bustle of the animals. With its unfinished character, nature offers a wealth of play opportunities. A tree root can be a horse, a car, a pirate ship or as a cozy chair to linger and listen to the sounds of the forest. We cultivate an appreciative and non violent communication, caring for each other and the things that surround us, and we learn together. Of particular importance to us is a conscious design of the transitions – to kindergarten, from group to group, and to school. We see these as important steps that require familiar, invigorating and loving accompaniment so that the children can grow and move on inwardly.

About the activity

We have 51 children in 3 groups. The volunteers accompany the children playing, carving, crafting, climbing and having lunch and vespers. In addition, there are small household tasks to do, in which all employees of the kindergarten help. Furthermore, there is always the opportunity to carry out a project of their own, to arrange morning rounds and to support them during the festive organization. Intercultural parents' cafés and evening events can also be co designed. Each year, we have a tent camp and a farewell ritual weekend for the older children. Supporting those, the volunteers learn to work independently and implement their ideas in projects with children between 1 and 7 years. They get to know children in their free play and learn how to join them with simple and few resources. In addition, they get to know the work in a team. They experience appreciative communication and are encouraged to represent or protect their interests and boundaries. During all of this, they can learn German.

Volunteer Profile

Age: 18–30 years old

We are looking for a dedicated, responsible, and enthusiastic volunteer to join our kindergarten team. The ideal candidate should have experience working with children or a genuine passion for child development, along with patience, creativity, and the ability to engage children in fun and educational activities. Open-mindedness and the ability to work with diverse groups, along with strong communication skills, are essential. The volunteer should love being in nature and feel comfortable spending time outdoors, even in the cold German winter :) Our kindergarten emphasizes outdoor play and learning, regardless of the weather, and we need someone who enjoys the natural environment year round.
